Carol was a very well-respected teacher in all the schools she taught because of her true concern for children as well as her work ethic.

One of her ex-students dedicated a book to her, citing her as his inspiration to write while she was his teacher.

She always had an artistic flair and that was evident in the Art projects she offered to students as well as the beautiful wall displays she designed.

When she retired, Carol took her talent for painting further and completed some lovely pieces of work which hang proudly in the homes of family and friends. She loved nature, and that was often the subject of her work.

Her sense of humour came through in the many little pranks she played and she was greatly appreciated on staffs for that.

Carol's cooking excelled and it was such a treat to be invited to her home for a meal. Before the internet, she extensively collected recipes, but never totally followed one, as she had the talent to recognize how they could immediately be improved.
